—KNOW the WEATHER—
By E. H. Sims
Is an inch of rain a heavy rainfall? How does it compare with an inch of snow?
An inch of rainfall is a very heavy rain. Over a one-acre parcel of land, an inch of rain means 603 45 - gallon barrels of water have been released or 27,143 gallons of water.
An inch of snow, however, does not constitute a heavy release of water from the clouds. It is estimated that ten inches of snow are required to equal, in water content, one inch of rainfall.
Thus, an eight or ten inch snowfall actually represents less than an inch of precipitation, measured in water or rain, which some of us hadn't realized.

GOOD REASON?
Lawrence, Mass. — District Court Judge William E. Daly recently heard testimony about a poker game and then dropped a charge against James Hester of assault and battery on his wife.
Hester testified he was holding three aces and his wife would not lend him a dollar to bet the hand.
'What did the other fellow have?' asked the judge.
"Only two pairs," replied Hester.
Mrs. Hester testified her husband knocked her against a chair when she refused to give him the dollar.

by c. h. r.

I have had friends bring me all manner of items, but had a new experience Friday when Miss Hazel Moon came in with a two-foot snake to me and Mrs. Hanley Phelps had poisoned to death in the Moon front yard.

Recently added to my collection of odds and ends, a Jew's Harp. This musical gadget was a great favorite years ago, and could be purchased very cheaply. But few saved them. And now they are rare. S. J. Evans sells me he has one, and he can play it, too .I have not learned how to play a Jew's Harp.

Those who have been to New Orleans will remember that in front of Jackson Square you always find artists available to paint portraits or caricatures. I posed for 15 minutes and for $2.50 an artist made a pen-and-ink caricature of me. He flattered me, making me look younger than I am.

We stopped in Alexandria, Louisiana, away out near the Texas border. As I registered at a motor court, the proprietor looked down, and said, "Sir, you come from Old Appomattox, Va.?" I said yes, and went into a speech about his grandfather, from Alabama, who had been a Colonel in Gen. Lee's Army, and was at Appomattox in 1865. I said, "I have always wanted to visit Appomattox, Va., and hope to some day." When we arrived home, I found a nice card from this gentleman and if I ever get around to it, will look up his grandfather in my copy of Vo. 15, Southern Historical Papers.

Near at hand is St. Valentine's Day. As long ago as 270 A. D., the observe period of Lupercalia was being observed by the pagans. And the feasting and games, there was a drawing of lots for partners for the coming year. The girls placed their names in an urn, and the young man who drew a girl's name was to be her sweetheart for a year. About this time, the Emperor Claudius It was waging constant war, and issued an order that there be no new marriages. He figured that married men were not eager to leave home and go off to engage in wars if were single men. But Valentine, a courageous priest, believed that real marriage was the best way, and he continued to marry the young couples who came to him. Claudius heard of this, and had Valentine imprisoned, and tradition is that he was beheaded on February 14. And so the story of the patron saint of young love became fixed in the folkways. Eventually the feasting and making of attractive "valentines" became big business. One say Esther Howland was the first printer, and her items are now greatly sought by collectors. She sold out to Whitney, and others, who became famous for their output of cards: Louis Prang, of Boston; Raphael Tuck & Co., etc. Charles Howard is said to be the originator of the comic valentine, He drew cartoons of them from about 1880 to 1910. During this span, up to 20 million a year of his comics were distributed. But in recent years, the comic valentine has faded, and now we are firmly entrenched in the use of the sweetheart messages and the sentimental sending of valentines. And the candy people have gotten on to the idea with a "sweets to the sweet" motif.

The Scouts then worked in groups on badges, Miss Linda Shouse, who has been in Lima, Peru, was welcomed back to the troop.

Garden Club Hears Talk On Hollies As Shrubs

"Hollies" as the best all-around shrub in landscaping was the subject of a talk given by Mrs. John G. Mohr, of Holterton Farms, Inc., Lynchburg, to the Appomattox Garden Club on Monday Jan. 26. Mrs. Mohr spoke on various uses of hollies in landscaping, growth habits, and the success of having heavily-berried shrubs. She showed specimen cuttings of many of the varieties available in American, English, Chinese, and Japanese hollies.

Mrs. Samuel S .Shouse was welcomed back to the club, after a year's residence in Lima, Peru.

Winners in the arrangement exhibits, "Making the Most of Greens," were Mrs. George, F. Langran, blue, and Mrs. R .C. Hubbard, red.

Virginia's General Assembly, in a special session to consider the pressing school situation in the Old Dominion, yesterday heard Governor J. Lindsay Almond request that a program of repeal of the compulsory attendance law, and adoption of the tuition grants could be enacted now, and then the Assembly be in recess while a more detailed study was made.

The Governor said, "I pledged to the people of Virginia that I would resist with every resource at command that which I know to be wrong and would destroy every vestigial semblance of effective public education in Virginia. I have kept that pledge and you have kept it. Only those Virginians whose hearts are not in the fray give up in adversity."

ABBITT SPOKE AT PETERSBURG

Petersburg, Va.- Jan. 23.- Rep. Watkins M. Abbitt (D-Va.) said Friday night he is convinced "the state administration, working with the General Assembly, can find a solution" to the school desegregation crisis.

But he said that if the fight against race mixing in the class room is to be successful, it will have to be on a state-wide basis.

"It must be fought at every school where the issue is raised," Abbitt said. "If integration of the public schools is permitted anywhere within our borders at any time with the acquiescence of the state, the fight to preserve constitutional government on a state-wide basis is lost."

In a speech before the Petersburg-Colonial Heights-Hopewell Real Estate Board, Abbitt said the recent court decisions "do not and will not mean that the public schools of Virginia will be integrated, provided the state administration and the people of Virginia continue to stand firm and exert every necessary effort to preserve the constitutional principles involved of the right of the state to govern its own internal affairs.

"We cannot and we must not permit integregation in a single public school in Virginia. Ways and means can be and must be found to cope with this situation and to preserve public education."

A decision which could mean several hundreds of thousands of dollars to Appomattox County will be made in the near future by the State Highway Department, subject to approval by Federal road authorities.

Involved is the route location of a new super inter-state Federally sponsored highway, a component part of a vast network of national defense highways to cost billions of dollars and requiring years for completion.

At issue at the moment, is whether a section of this entirely new super expressway from Richmond to Clifton Forge, will use a "northern," or a "southern" route. The "northern" route would pass the highway from Richmond westward approximating existing Route 250 to Charlottesville and Staunton and to Lexington and on to Clifton Forge. The project on this route calls for a 9,000 foot tunnel and the job would cost $191,786,000, with $11,763,000 for rights of way.

The "southern" route, which would go through Appomattox County, between Appomattox and Vera, would cost $229,126,000, with $19,250,000 for rights of way and $209,876,000 for construction. It would be slightly longer, but the cost per mile would be less and it would more people and more industry.

Towns, cities and counties along the two proposed routes have been heavily concerned as to the final selection. A new study has just been completed, and about a month from now ,final hearings will be called.

A total attendance figure of 78,500 was reported for the calendar year 1958, at the Appomattox Court House National Historical Park, it was announced today.

That this figure was 7,500 less than the 86,000 reported for 1957 was attributed to the fact that large school groups visited Appomattox during the spring of 1957, en route to Jamestown for the big Jamestown Festival that year. Other than this, the attendance here was normal, or perhaps slightly above normal during 1958.

The number of tickets sold for admission to the McLean House during 1958 was 13,850, bringing in a total of $3,472.50.

Due to lack of heating facilities, the McLean House is not regularly open during winter weather. Guides are on duty seven days a week at the National Park Service office and Museum and Tavern, and the guides will gladly take visitors for a visit through the McLean House, despite the absence of heating arrangements there. Historians are on duty from 9 to 5 daily. Special arrangements can always be made for groups or individuals to visit the McLean House.

The visits of the many thousands each year at the National Park is a major consideration in and around Appomattox and with the approach of the Centennial Years, 1961-65, an even greater attendance is anticipated. Present plans for the restoration of the complete area to be through before the 1965 anniversary of the peace made here April 9, 1865, ending the War Between the States. There is some hope that the Old Court House Building may be rebuilt by 1963. Work is progressing on schedule of other historic buildings in the approximately 900-acre area, owned by the Park Service. In 1959, major work will be done on the location and re-location to original lines of entrance roads.

Elementary School S. C. A.

The regular meeting of the Appomattox Elementary School S. C. A. was held Jan. 9. Freddie Carter is vice-president and presided. Mrs. Cunningham's room had charge of the program. Rev. Cravens gave a very inspiring talk.

THE APPOMATTOX STORY:

(One of a Series)

At the last Council of War, Lee and his Staff had decided that on the morning of Palm Sunday, April 9, 1865, one last desperate attempt should be made to break through the encircling Union Army. Gen. John B. Gordon was to make the thrust against Sheridan. Gen. Fitz Lee and the Confederate Cavalry were to share in the attack. They were to move at 1 A. M. and be in position to attack at daybreak. The situation was desperate, but there then occurred one of those interesting little sidelights of history. Gen. Gordon suddenly thought: What if I manage to break through . . . .how far should I march before halting for the night? And, he sent one of his staff back to Lee to ask that question. "Yes," said Gen. Lee, after hearing the question . . . "Tell Gen. Gordon that I should be glad for him to halt just beyond the Tennessee line."
